With school starting over, that means it's time to buy items back to school. Retonder Your children's school supplies from last year won't be cheap, and if you're not careful, it could even be detrimental to your bank account. The National Retail Federation says the average family with children in grades K-12 will spend $664.79 on clothing, shoes, supplies and electronics. That's a 5 percent increase from last year. In total, the combined spending to go back to school and college will reach almost $83 billion. Improvements in the economy may have contributed to the growth in confidence among buyers going back to school", said NRF President and CEO, Matthew Shay. "Expect to see continuous improvement in consumer spending until the year, we know that Americans are still With your purchase decisions all day. "To save on purchases back to school it is a must if you can not pay. To spend around $ 700 in supplies. Smart Shoppers must download a coupon application on your smart phone To see what offers can have the stores before before And check if your state offers tax-free weekends. Tip: At least 15 states have a tax-free weekend in August that can save some money by sourcing supplies. Taking advantage of discounts isn't the only tactic smart shoppers should rely on when they're trying to save on back-to-school shopping. If you know you'll have this big dent in your budget this fall, it's important that you take advantage of the deals and maximize your own savings potential. One way to do this is to use your credit card to buy because sliding your plastic could give it a boost. For example, you can get money back, get bigger discounts than advertised, and even save on buying a warranty or miss a sale just by using your credit card when you buy your school supplies. Here are 4 ways you can buy back-to-school items to make both your children and your bank account happy: 1. Use your rewards credit card You might lose a few hundred dollars shopping on the way to school, but you can make up some of that by using a high rewards credit card to make your purchases. So, which high reward credit card should I get? Well, it really depends on what you want from your card. For some cards, you can redeem points and miles for merchandise and travel. In this case, since you are going to be buying school supplies, electronics and clothes, a refund card offers you the greatest versatility. You will want to use a card that has a good reward rate – 2% or more – to do your sweep. If you have a card that pays you back more money or doubles points at pharmacies or grocery stores, you can also go there first to see what supplies you can get to maximize your rewards. If you don't have a credit card yet, in your wallet, learn more about high-reward credit cards and find out which one best suits your lifestyle. 2. Purchase through the online portal of your credit card While you charge your expenses back to school on a reward or money back money card, take advantage of your profits to maximize your money-making potential. Make your purchases through your credit card mall and not only will you be able to buy the items you need, but you will also earn rewards and points for using your credit card. The items you can buy really depend on your credit card shopping portal and what they offer, but on general terms, you can earn bonus points on things like clothes and gadgets. For example, when you shop through a portal using certain credit cards in stores like JCPenney, you can earn 10 percent cash. If you shop at stores like Macy's or Target, you can get back 5% in cash. Check your credit card portal to see which stores can give you extra winnings. Even if you don't have a reward credit card, you can still take advantage of reward programs like Ebates and Mr. Rebates to shop, but we strongly recommend that you have at least one refund credit card. 3. Protect your prices with your credit card Have you ever bought an item and then found out that its price went down a week later? Maybe you did all your shopping back to school early and missed some big sales. Or maybe you just wanted to do all your shopping in a store and have made some purchases at full price. If you pay with your credit card, you could take advantage of something called price protection. What's that? Basically, if you bought an item and its price has fallen within a defined period of time, your card issuer will refund the difference. Note: There are exclusions and not all credit cards offer this benefit, so you should check if yours does. You will also have to notify the credit card company of the price difference, however, if you have the benefit, you should take advantage of it and the difference. 4. Forget about the extended store warranty According to the NRF, back-to-school shoppers will spend an average of $212 on electronics, a 7% increase over last year. If you wish, you wish. Electronic expenses: like a portable computer or a luxury calculator, or any article that comes with a manufacturer's warranty, use your credit card when buying. Why? You can take advantage of the protection of the guarantee that provides your card. Most of the main credit cards will extend the warranty of the article that is buying (if they charge it on their card) for up to one year. Of course, you will want to review the guidelines of your credit card to see how it covers your specific card, but it would be worth it so that it does not become the purchase of expected warranty coverage through the retailer.
